It took time in resorting connectivity between the Customs and the Immigration computers, based upon sound-dex principle. During the period the computerised linkage and exchange of information was not operative, alerts issued by the DRI were kept in Master folder and referred to for follow-up checks of particular suspect passengers. Similarly, local alerts were also being monitored as and when the situation demanded and even help of the Immigration Authorities taken. There were no orders issued for discontinuation of the Customs Visadex System.

(e) Does not arise in view of the position stated at (c) and (d) above. However, the reasons for non-operation and steps required to make the system effectively functional are being further examined in coordination with immigration Authorities.
